BPM Microsystems Wins 2007 Service Excellence Award

HOUSTON — February 19, 2007 — BPM Microsystems, a leading supplier of device programming systems worldwide, announces that it has been awarded a 2007 Circuits Assembly Service Excellence Award in the category of Electronics Suppliers — Device Programming Equipment for its outstanding customer ratings, as judged by BPM Microsystems' own customers.

Circuits Assembly Editor-in-Chief Mike Buetow presented the award to William White, president and CEO, during a Monday, February 19, 2007 reception that took place in Los Angeles, CA before the start of APEX.

The 15th annual Service Excellence Awards present awards to EMS providers, and equipment and software suppliers. The awards honor companies in the manufacturing industry that exceed expectations in customer service.

For the awards in the Equipment Suppliers and Software Suppliers categories, companies are rated on a scale of 1 (poor) to 5 (superior) in five service categories: dependability; ease of use; responsiveness; technology; and value for price.
