Creative Electron Bring the New TruView™ Fusion AXI to APEX and to the CFX Line

Creative Electron's all new TruView™ Fusion AXI will be introduced at the 2019 IPC APEX Exhibition in San Diego, CA, from January 29th to 31st. The TruView™ Fusion AXI will be working at the CFX line as a part of IPC's a demonstration of the next generation Smart SMT line, ready for Industry 4.0.

Designed for the high mix SMT environment, the TruView™ Fusion AXI has a “one-button” program interface and a fully automated operation and is intuitive and easy to use so the user will not need to become x-ray experts.

Creative Electron President, Dr. Bill Cardoso says; “Even if you aren’t looking for an inline x-ray machine, you will want to buy efficiency for your line, and that’s exactly what the TruView™ Fusion AXI gives you.” Adding; “You can quickly turn data into information, information into action, and action into performance improvements that drive return on investment.”

Griffin Lemaster, Creative Electron’s COO added, “your next AXI system has to be a source of information, not of bottlenecks. With a 25 second cycle time, the TruView™ Fusion AXI can keep up with the fastest lines.”

Integration into the line is key to successfully using data from inspection to improve performance and having the CFX line at APEX creates the ideal opportunity to show the TruView™ Fusion AXI in a real line situation and the value that can be derived from using multiple inspection sources.

As well as an appearance on the CFX line Creative Electron’s expert team will be in booth #1525 on the show floor where they will be exhibiting their TruView™ Prime benchtop x-ray and their TruView™ Parts Counter AI, the first parts counter on the market using artificial intelligence to generate more accurate information and detect counterfeit components.
