

Silicon Mountain Contract Services Announces Name Transition to SMCS, Reinforcing U.S. Manufacturing and Scalable Operations

NAMPA, ID — February 2026 — Silicon Mountain Contract Services, a U.S.-based provider of electronics manufacturing services, today announced a name transition to SMCS, effective early 2026. The updated name reflects the company's continued growth and its focus on scalable, process-driven manufacturing built in the United States.

The transition to SMCS is a name-only change. Ownership, leadership, employees, facilities, capabilities, and customer commitments remain unchanged. All existing agreements, open orders, and customer points of contact will continue without interruption.

"The transition to SMCS better represents who we are today and how our customers engage with us," said Eddie Garcia, Operations

Manager. "Our customers rely on us for disciplined processes, consistent execution, and the ability to scale—from early builds through sustained production. The SMCS name reflects that role more clearly."

SMCS is a domestic electronics manufacturing partner delivering Made-in-the-USA solutions supported by documented processes, traceability, and repeatable execution. Operating from its Pacific Northwest facility, SMCS serves customers across a wide range of industries, supporting both emerging programs and high-volume, complex production.

The company's operating model emphasizes process control, supply-chain reliability, and predictable outcomes, enabling customers to move efficiently from development to production while reducing risk. SMCS supports low-to-high volume builds and provides Design for Manufacturability (DFM) input to improve product performance, quality, and manufacturability.

With experienced personnel, modern equipment, and flexible capacity, SMCS helps customers maintain quality, control costs, and meet demanding production schedules—while keeping manufacturing domestic.

For more information about SMCS capabilities and services, visit www.siliconmtn.net.

About SMCS

SMCS (Silicon Mountain Contract Services) is a U.S.-based electronics manufacturing partner supporting customers from product development through full-scale production. The company's approach is built on disciplined processes, manufacturing expertise, and a strong understanding of time-to-market and supply-chain demands.